Learning Support

Down Syndrome

Down syndrome is a condition in which a person has an extra chromosome. Chromosomes are small “packages” of genes in the body. They determine how a baby's body forms and functions as it grows during pregnancy and after birth. Babies with Down syndrome have an extra copy of one of these chromosomes, chromosome 21. This extra copy changes how the baby's body and brain develop. Each person with Down syndrome is an individual — and their intellectual and developmental challenges

Strategies to support Down Syndrome

Each person with Down syndrome has different talents and the ability to thrive.

- Early interventions such as speech and language, occupational and physical therapy etc. will help to develop their skills
- Talk to your child's school so interventions, or help and support can be put in place if needed

- Speak to other families in the community and groups for support
- Encourage independence as much as possible
- Participate in social and leisure activities
- Prepare them for transitions, especially into adulthood and expect a bright future!
